

1 urban, and human nature being what it is, that is where 2 you are going to end up.

3 MR. SYKES: Can't you solve the problem by 4 putting in a provision in the Constitution, which is as 5 far as you can go in the Constitution, to the effect that 6 the Legislature shall provide from time to time for a
7 system of appellate judicial districts designed to achieve 8 substantial equality of treatment, fair representation for 9 the different geographical parts of the State.

10 MR. ENEY: The deliberate purpose of this 11 provision right at the moment, I think you ought to 12 understand the purpose, is to have the complete flexibility
13 of districting by the Legislature, just as you would 14 have under the other amendment to which you refer, but in 15 addition, to leave it to the Legislature if it so deter-
16 mines to provide for statewide election of judges.

17 JUDGE CARTER: That is the exact point.

18 MR. ENEY: That is exactly what it provides for.

19 JUDGE CARTER: That is my point. I don't think 20 the Constitution ought to leave that thing as wide open 21 as that to a Legislature that is predominantly urban and
